As climate change wreaks havoc all over the world, most of us look on with a combination of wonder and dismay. But Jonathan Goold views the problem differently.

Goold sees global warming as an exciting and lucrative opportunity, a way to profit from the crisis on planet Earth. This film follows Goold as he mounts an expedition to find gold under melting glaciers. Along the way, it delivers historical commentary, stunning scenery and curious scientific know-how. But more than just an adventure story, the film illustrates the evolution of one man's regard for the environment: an arc from greedy recklessness, to wonder and appreciation, to a new understanding -albeit unconventional- of the need to resist environmental destruction. It's the story of a potentially dangerous man figuring out what he really believes.
